October 27, 2012 I shot video and took film photographs while on a trip with Maggie and Kevin to the Cumberland Gap National Historic Park. I uploaded one clip to a Face Book group on the next day. This is a still frame from the video.

Open the heart

You stood at the window and watched another sun come up
Turned and looked in the mirror on the wall
The lines you notice are just wrinkles in time
And the love you miss is just down the hall

You think about how it used to be at the start
And how the dreams you lived were from the heart
Now the ship you missed isn't coming back to port
And the love you miss leaves a heart full of hurt

The sunshine burns your eyes as you fight the tears
There's no need to stop and count the years
A passion once lived has now turned into leers
And the love you miss is a life full of fears

You pick up the pieces as the day moves along
A pained smile as you walk into a world gone wrong
With a knot in your stomach as big as King Kong
And the love that you miss is still playing its song

We can't live on bread alone in a world of isolation
We can't connect to love as victims in insulation
We have to open our hearts up to the situation
So the love we feel is more than just imagination
